ONE WOMAN ON A MISSION

Stacia Glavas is the CEO/Founder of Brevard Rescue Mission, (BRM) Inc., a nonprofit organization whose main focus is to “permanently break the cycle of homelessness for single women with children.” One of Stacia’s favorite success stories is about a woman with two small boys, no car, and no job. After completing BRM’s faith-based residential program, the woman secured full-time employment, married her boys’ father, and then donated $1,000 toward another family’s life transformation. Stacia credits her desire to help others with learning a “can-do” outlook while growing up on a farm. After earning her MBA, working on Capitol Hill, and owning a small business, a call on her life led her into ministry. One very lost woman turned her life around, and Stacia knew God was directing her to do for many what she had done for this one. Today, BRM has helped more than 50 families in less than 5 years. When asked what she would do if money were no object, Stacia mentioned expansion. BRM turns away about 300 callers per year. An entire village of structured communal living could facilitate growth in women and families with more challenging needs.
